Overview

Bachelor of Fine Arts in Creative Communication Design is an international design curriculum for the next generation that integrates art and design practices, creative vision, and interaction technologies. Students gain professional practice through real case studies in digital imagery and graphic design while applying marketing experiences into creative businesses. The program inspires students to become resourceful designers engaged in visual communication through real-world design opportunities and entrepreneurship in response to social responsibility and contemporary culture in the digital age.

The program aims to develop the ability to articulate a creative vision and communicate ideas visually by exploring the relationship between design, business, society, technology, and culture. Students with a communication design degree will be creative and highly adaptable practitioners in the ever-changing field of design.

Creative Communication Design department offers two major concentrations:

1. Digital Imagery – explores the art of moving image and focuses on the technological tools and creative skills required in the fields of film, animation and game design

CCD supports the creative process and professional development through real-world design opportunities and entrepreneurship in response to social responsibility and contemporary culture in the digital age. Graduates of the program will leave Albert Laurence School of Communication Arts prepared to forge careers in the creative design space.

The maximum penalty for plagiarism is dismissal from the University or suspension from registering in the following semester(s).

Process:

1. A lecturer who suspect's plagiarism has occurred must provide evidence (through identifying the source) to support their allegation. The chairperson must decide whether or not he/she believes the plagiarism was likely to have been intentional or unintentional.

2. If the student is unable to provide a satisfactory explanation of the correspondence between the student's work and the sources identified by the lecturer, the chairperson may infer that plagiarism was done with intention to cheat.
3. The lecturer and the chairperson will determine the level of penalty deemed necessary and have the student sign the department's plagiarism form.
4. If the student does not accept the claims of the lecturer and chairperson, the plagiarism case will be brought forth to the department academic committee. If the student does not further accept the claims of the academic committee, the case will then be brought forth to the dean.
